

Nasdaq International Hosts Its Fourth Designation Virtual Investor conference

September 28, 2018

NEW YORK, Sept. 28, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Nasdaq, Inc. (Nasdaq: NDAQ) announced the conclusion of its Fourth Nasdaq International Designation Virtual Investor conference on September 19, 2018. Select member companies from around the globe presented their current state of business to a broad audience including potential investors. The conference also provided individual and institutional investors an opportunity to engage with CEOs, CFOs, and IROs from a wide range of sectors globally.

As a comprehensive program, member companies receive full access to Nasdaq's robust visibility platform that includes investor relation tools and services that enhance communication with the investment community, and potentially increase liquidity. The program does not impose SEC filing requirements or otherwise change your regulatory obligations.

Nasdaq International is a designation. The companies are not listed or traded on The Nasdaq Stock Market LLC, and are not subject to the same listing or qualification standards applicable to securities listed or traded on an exchange. The U.S. shares of these companies trade on the OTC market

About The Nasdaq International Designation:

The Nasdaq International Designation program is designed for non-U.S.-based companies that have Level I American Depositary Receipts or shares that trade in the over-the-counter (OTC) market. The program offers a unique partnership with Nasdaq that provides member companies with Nasdaq's strong visibility offering, which allows for greater access to U.S. investors and can potentially increase liquidity.

Members of the program were invited to the Nasdaq MarketSite to amplify their brand activities through different channels. We look forward to helping our members to continue to grow their brands, increase liquidity and shape their personal messages to the investment community.
